Nicodemus Ministry is an indigenous ministry serving in some of the neediest parts of North India. In 2015 a school was started in Bareilly. The aim is to use the school as a community centre to offer training as well as an opportunity for positive interactions with the local community. In the mornings the school building provides education up to 8th grade and in the afternoons it operates as a community outreach centre, running income generation training for women like sewing, computer training, paper plate making and beautician training, and also a community medical centre. Nicodemus Ministry has run this similar strategy successfully in a project in Madhya Pradesh which has led to job opportunities for over 100 women. The specific part of this partnership that Shared Hope is supporting is a computer training centre which is a new dimension in the ministry. The course runs for one year and they are looking to take around 20 students in two batches each day, 10 students each batch. As well as computer training there will be English classes in the evenings. Training in IT and English are very relevant to securing employment in India as they are everywhere in the world today.

Nicodemus Ministry was established by Sushil and Sara Tyagi in 2005. Sushil has previously worked with Operation Mobilisation (OM) and Youth With A Mission (YWAM). The practical ministry they have been engaged in has proved to be very effective. They are now extending the scope of their ministry and we are pleased to be part of this.
