This project is an extension of a loan scheme project that Bright Hope World has been involved in for several years and which has run successfully during that time. The scheme embraces thirty widows and single mothers and they themselves took the initiative to start small projects to generate income. These projects range from selling small items, trading food and charcoal and running small restaurants. They are all victims of the internal conflict with the Lord's Resistance Army. The ladies all collected a small amount of money together and set up a loan scheme. Bright Hope World came in to support this scheme and Shared Hope finances this project through Bright Hope World.

As with the project in Mbale SHUGA 2, Anna Ocen is the key person in this partnership. Anna is married to Simon and they have a small family of their own but also care for a few other children that they have brought into their family. They live in Mbale. She is an accountant so is able to provide good reports.
