The Echoes of Mercy School started several years ago and has a roll now of 225 children spanning nine classes from pre-school groups to primary five. As is seen in the above picture the classrooms are high quality in terms of construction and the school is well equipped. Over the last couple of years this educational establishment has emerged as the top school in the region in terms of academic results. There are 40 schools in the area. There are 11 teachers, all of whom are qualified, and a head master of outstanding ability, vision and drive. Unlike most schools in this kind of environment in Africa there is a wide curriculum that embraces visits to historical sites and other venues of academic interest. In the summer holidays the school is used as a teacher training centre. In summary, the progress made in this school in the few years of its existence has been quite outstanding and is a tribute both to Moses and to the head teacher.

The leader of the project is Moses Omondi who was previously the director of a Christian based programme in schools that involved as many as 75,000 each week. Although Moses grew up in a village situation, he is a very innovative and visionary leader. Moses has not forgotten the poverty of his youth and he has invested his time and energy in transforming his village with the introduction of clean water, a church, a school and a clinic.
